Water tank being built in Upland to store water

By ANDREA ADELSON
Staff Writer

In summer, when water use and fire danger rise with the thermometer, demand for water outstrips present capacity stored in north Upland.

Before more development in the San Antonio Heights drains reservoirs dry, a new 5-million-gallon storage tank is being built to catch water spilling from the San Antonio Canyon for irrigation and domestic consumption.

Now, even if doomsayers' predictions for California going dry prove true, Upland residents will have a huge storehouse to tap.

"This should take care of the capacity for a decade," said Charlie Thomas, manager of San Antonio Water Co., which is sharing the tank's cost with the city of Upland.

It's located in the foothills above 26th Street and beneath Ontario peak. No energy will be needed when the tank is filled in mid-March. Nature's gravitational pull will draw water in and out, Thomas said.

During construction work in the last month, 80 mph winds partially collapsed the first level before the tub was welded to its floor. Construction crews now shift anchoring ropes each day as wind direction changes.

"It'll be a solid piece when we're through," foreman Ron Chandler said, except for flexibility allowed in tank walls for seismic shaking.

Four hundred tons of rectangular carbon steel slabs fabricated by Kaiser Steel create the tank's four rings. Before it is filled, the reservoir's interior will be coated with epoxy, cured for 30 days, and then sprayed with chlorine, he said.

At the tank's center, a voice not raised over conversational tones echoes in the near-perfect circular chamber despite the roar of welding machinery.

The floor is assembled like a puzzle, with squares laid side-to-side, and the edges melded together mechanically with a shiny weld, equipment refined for tank building by Trusco Tank Co., of San Luis Obispo.

The $540,000 tank is the first joint venture between the city and the 100-year-old water company, formed to irrigate farmlands surrounding the Ontario colony. Upland is San Antonio Water Co.'s largest stockholder.

Surplus water company land was sold and shareholders went without dividends to pay for the tank, manager Thomas said.

Its cost is "extremely cheap," according to Trusco President Jerry Trussler.

Upland's gain is an indirect benefit of the world-wide oil glut. Of the handful of firms in the state that specialize in building petroleum and water storage tanks, fierce bidding on available projects — nearly all water tanks — is reducing price, Trussler said.

City residents tap their water from the huge underground Chino Basin. Water flowing from faucets north of 24th Street is provided by the San Antonio Water Co., which filters the liquid through canyon tunnels, collects and processes it in the foothills, and now stores it in a 1.5 million gallon reservoir.

Wendy Park's loving and patient touch helps daughter Jennifer recover from a near-drowning.

Parents face battle in the wake of daughter's swimming pool tragedy

By JIM MARXEN
Staff Writer

When their 1½-year-old daughter, Jennifer, nearly drowned in the backyard swimming pool last July, Bob and Wendy Park of Rancho Cucamonga had no idea what kind of battle they faced.

While their daughter struggled to reverse the damage done to her brain, the Parks engaged in their own struggle against a bureaucracy they have found to be more unbending than Jennifer's frozen limbs.

Frustration and bitterness are the byproducts of their six-month effort to obtain state aid for Jennifer's medical costs.

"The worst thing has been dealing with government agencies," Bob said. "I think the system's all screwed up."

With no insurance to cover the medical costs, the Parks applied for Medi-Cal on four occasions and each time they "struck out."

"They want you to have nothing," Bob said. "And if you have anything, they'll take it. I don't think the system was built that way."

Park figured he'd have to lose most of his assets to qualify for help. But after losing his flooring business and ridding himself of investments, he wonders how much more he can lose.

"The middle class who pays the taxes can't get anything when they need it," he said. "... it's bad."

"We knew it was bad," Wendy added, "but we didn't know it was as bad as it is."

Already faced with about $50,000 in medical bills, the couple expects another round of debts when their second child is born next month.

"I don't let this get to me because I believe I'm a winner," Bob said. And with a nod toward his daughter, he added, "And she's a winner too ... she comes from good stock."

Though pride and a desire to lick the odds may seem to be about the only thing the Parks have on their side, they have received some help from the Elks Club (the San Bernardino County Council of Elks) and there is a hope that Jennifer will be enrolled in a special program later this year.

Bob is back in the flooring business, earning what money he can to pay the family's bills.

"We live week-to-week every week," he said.

R.C. firefighters decide not to press lawsuit

By JIM MARXEN
Staff Writer

Rancho Cucamonga's firefighters will not press suit against the Foothill Fire Protection District over an administrative reorganization plan approved last year, it was agreed recently.

The firefighters association voted not to support any additional litigation brought against the district by former inspector Susan Wolfe. The association also conceptually agreed to a new position created for Wolfe last Monday.

Thursday's vote removes a good share of the opposition to last year's reorganization plan.

"I'm happy this is over with," said board President Daniel Richards, a leading proponent of reorganization. "We've got some good things going on and this has overshadowed them ... this is now history."

Wolfe was one of four employees affected by the effort to "streamline" fire inspection and administrative duties within the district. Three other employees accepted new positions late last year.

The only employee to receive a cut in her pay and benefits, Wolfe sought reimbursement and a return to her old job.

On Monday, the district's board of directors created a new position for the former inspector and restored her pay and benefit package.

Wolfe accepted the position "under protest" and with the apparent backing of the firefighters association.

But on Thursday afternoon, the association changed its position.

"As an association we felt the deal we had negotiated was fair and equitable," said association president Mike Ploung.

He said the association's goal was to protect Wolfe's pay and benefits and that Monday's settlement had fulfilled that responsibility.

Ploung said the association also agreed to sign the settlement — a position it had balked at on Monday.

"The association wanted to see what move the board would make (on Monday)," Ploung said. "We wanted to see if the trust was there."

Ploung said Thursday's vote was 17 in favor of the settlement, four against and two abstentions.

Wolfe voted against the settlement but offered no comment on the association's action.

"I'll have to get back with my attorney," she said.

The association agreed to reimburse $2,500 to Wolfe and Vera Arthur (who also sought legal aid following the reorganization) for attorney fees incurred early in the process.

It was the one bright spot for Wolfe who said she found the action "very gratifying".

While there is still some political opposition to the reorganization (a citizens group opposing the board majority was formed immediately after the plan was approved), much of the controversy is apparently over.

Richards called the experience a "learning process".

"The concept of reorganization is a sound concept," he said, "but along the way there may have been some steps taken that could have been avoided."

As for the reorganization itself, he said some "healthy" changes had taken place.

Richards described this year's cost savings as "minimal" but predicted that savings will grow with each year.

"The activities and services are being handled on a much more professional level," Richards said. "A lot more productrive things are happening — the bureau is an agressive unit taking new ideas and new approaches."

An issue that had driven a wedge between the board, the reorganization's wounds may take some time to heal. But Richards offered consolation to those who fought the plan.

"I'm certainly not angry at anybody who woud be in opposition to us," he said.

Ontario museum to show works of three artists

The Chaffey Community Art Association will present an exhibition of the work of Robert J. Fleck, Hendrik Grise and Max Vaucher in February at the Museum of History and Art, 225 S. Euclid Ave., Ontario.

"Three Artists/Three Points of View" is the theme of the exhibition, which opens Feb. 6 and continues through Feb. 26. It will be open from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Thursdays through Saturdays and from 2 to 4 p.m. Sundays.

The public is invited to an opening reception on Feb. 6 from 2 to 4 p.m. at the museum, where Fleck, Grise and Mrs. Vaucher, widow of the artist, will be guests.

All three artists have been associated with the local community through many years of teaching at Chaffey College and Chaffey High School and as working artists.

Inspired by travel in Arizona and New Mexico, Fleck builds his oil paintings of Southwest landscapes from sketches and memories. He came to California in 1951 from Philadelphia, where he taught at the Philadelphia College of Arts. He taught art and art history at Chaffey College from 1957 to 1979 and his work is represented in private collections in the United States and England.

Grise taught figure drawing for 30 years at Chaffey College, driving from Monterey Park, where he still lives. Originally a fashion illustrator and theatrical designer in the Midwest and Chicago, he moved to California during World War II. Grise's drawings have been shown widely in Southern California, notably at the Los Angeles County Fair exhibitions of arts and crafts in Pomona and at the Chaffey College Rex Wignall Museum Gallery in Alta Loma.

The late Mr. Vaucher was born and educated in Neuchatel, Switzerland. He taught French in Turkey before coming to Webb School in Claremont in 1928. When he retired Mr. Vaucher had been teaching art and French for 50 years, 28 of these at Chaffey High School.

For more information about the artists or their work, call Carolyn Batchelor or Norma Tanega at 983-3198.

Supervisors ready to drop out of IMA

By DON GREEN
Staff Writer

SAN BERNARDINO — A majority of the Board of Supervisors was ready Monday to drop out of the Inland Manpower Association and give the county direct control over federal job-training funds.

However, the board delayed the decision until next Monday at the suggestion of local Supervisor Robert Townsend.

The two supervisors who sit on the IMA board expressed opposing views.

Supervisor David McKenna pressed for the county to go into business for itself on the distribution of the job funds. Local Supervisor Cal McElwain, chairman of both the county and the IMA boards, said the agency has improved in recent years and that the county should continue with it.

The IMA oversees the distribution of manpower funds for its four member agencies, San Bernardino County, the city of San Bernardino, Riverside County and the city of Riverside.

Riverside County Supervisor Norton Younglove stressed that the two counties make up a common labor market and offered suggestions for changing the way the agency is organized and staffed.

McKenna noted that program changes and cutbacks by the Reagan administration make it more important for the county to exercise direct control over its share of the millions of dollars IMA distributes.

The Reagan administration has taken a block-grant approach to the job-training funds, which will be distributed by the state. McKenna noted that the city of San Bernardino would have the discretion to form its own service area for distributing the money.

"I differ in the concept," McKenna said. "It's a philosophical one. It's from the heart. It's not a power play. I feel that the trend is for decentralization, both at the federal level and the state level.

"I feel the new training act that we are obligated to work with — we have to work very closely with the state and federal authorities on that ..."

McKenna said he needed a "direct input" on the use of the county's share of the funds "because in our economy there is no tomorrow."

"I think the industrial revolution, as we know it, is rapidly leaving our landscape, and we've got to be prepared for the challenges of the computer age," he said.

By meeting weekly, the supervisors could more closely control the funds than the IMA board, which meets monthly, McKenna added.

McElwain said, "When I came on four years ago IMA was going in a different direction. It was very difficult. I think that I and several other board members from Riverside and city people were instrumental in turning IMA around. Let me tell you it was a difficult task.

"When it did come around, I think we hired some competent, hard-working, efficient staff, who have done an excellent job," he added.

Supervisor John Joyner said that if the county stuck with IMA, it planned to close three desert offices to be replaced by occasional visits with a "mobile unit."

"To me, that doesn't seem the way to go. We have a lot of people up there who do need service," said Joyner, who represents the high desert.

County group studies quake technology

By DON GREEN
Staff Writer

Local Supervisor Cal McElwain has returned from leading a county contingent to Europe for a two-week inspection tour of technology used to minimize earthquake damage.

McElwain has served on the board for the Southern California Earthquake Preparedness Project, for which the county was the lead agency. The trip was paid for by a grant from the National Science Foundation, he said.

He said the group visited London, Paris and Marseille, France, to learn about rubber-bearing techniques for safeguarding building foundations from earthquake damage. McElwain noted that in London the techniques are used because of heavy train vibrations.

While in Great Britain, McElwain said he made a side trip to Ireland with a representative of Linsey Engineering Inc. to inspect efforts there on converting waste to energy. McElwain heads the county's solid-waste management board.

Other county officials on the trip were County Administrative Officer Robert Rigney, Assistant County Administrative Officer Lynn Kirkhofer and administrative staff analyst John Michaelson.

Michaelson is the project director for the county on the planned law and justice center in Rancho Cucamonga. Because of the nearby faults, that center may make use of the rubber-bearing techniques, McElwain said.

Future visits to Malaysia and New Zealand are planned, but McElwain said he did not plan to go on those.

Casa Colina sets 'Sweetheart Ball'

Invitations to Casa Colina Auxiliary's annual "Sweetheart Ball" to be held Feb. 5 at Red Hill Country Club in Cucamonga are extended to all interested people.

During the evening, a specially selected valley couple will be honored as "Sweethearts of the Year."

Proceeds of the ball will support auxiliary projects.

Dinner-dance will benefit MS Society

A dinner and dance at a valley polka garden will benefit people who often have lost their ability to dance due to a progressive disease of the central nervous system.

The National Multiple Sclerosis Society of Southern California will be given the proceeds of the Feb. 6 fete that starts at 2 p.m. at Casaletti's Polka Palace in Rancho Cucamonga.

Doris Welch of Pomona, benefit chairman, has become deeply concerned about MS victims since she started attending David Woznicki, 32, a blind MS victim who is confined to a wheelchair.

Woznicki will attend the party which will raise money for others afflicted with his illness.

The cause of MS remains unknown. It has been attributed to an auto-immune mechanism of the body, a slow virus, toxic agents or trauma.

In most cases, the onset is between the ages of 20 and 40. It attacks men and women equally. The disease is usually marked by periods of remission and exacerbations.

Woznicki's disease was first diagnosed in 1972. His family was told then but he did not know the diagnosis until 1974, he said.

Woznocki said his disease caused a steady decline of his functions. He now is blind and can be heard only when he speaks with the assistance of a voice amplifier.

Mrs. Welch, a widow, met Woznocki when she worked in the convalescent hospital where he was confined. He now has quarters in her home.

Woznocki served in the U.S. Navy before his illness. He nowis considered 100 percent disabled and receives support from the Veterans Administration.

Visitors and friends are impressed by Woznocki's sense of humor in spite of his limited mobility.

He has been a patient at Casa Colina. He can be transported in a specially equipped van and likes to go camping.

Mrs. Welch said his favorite camping spot is Mountain Lake in Lytle Creek.

"Last year, we planned a MS benefit in Lytle Creek that was more than we bargained for," she said. "There was a major brush fire above the area and we were inundated with smoke and had to flee.

"We hope this year's party is less hectic."

The MS Society has its regional office in Glendale. The society helps provide medically prescribed equipment such as wheelchairs; helps with home nursing services; provides counseling, rehabilitation therapy and educational programs for the medical, professional and lay community; and offers recreation and self-help programs for victims.

Special equipment, such as the voice amplified which Woznicki recently acquired, helps victims with speech problems to communicate.

Tickets for the dinner and dance are $15. They may be purchased at the door.

Professor wins Ness award

Howard Bowen, professor of economics at Claremont Graduate School, has received the annual Ness Award of the Association of American Colleges for his book, "The State of the Nation and the Agenda for Higher Education."

Bowen has specialized in the economics of higher education, and in his book presents a detailed survey of American social trends and the major social problems in American society.

In his book, Bowen suggests that colleges should, in addition to offering regular studies, increase emphasis on social responsibility, confront the problems of American youth, and contribute to international reconciliation.

The award was established in honor of Frederick Ness, longtime president of the AAC.

Applications are available from high school counselors, college financial aid offices, or from the Student Aid Commission, 1410 Fifth St., Sacramento, 95814.

CBMWD reviews future Chino Basin sewer needs

By DON GREEN
Staff Writer

The Chino Basin Municipal Water District identified 190 acres at an estimated cost of $5.64 million last week in a review of land needed for future sewage treatment in the West Valley.

To help meet the needs of future growth, possible new treatment plant sites in Chino and Rancho Cucamonga will be explored.

General Manager Theo Nowak presented the staff study to the board, but he cautioned that local cities may be overestimating their ultimate sewage flows.

Projections showed the district serving a future population of 810,400 in the West Valley and Fontana when full build-out of development in the area occurs. That population and the forecasts for new commercial and industrial businesses translated into an eventual treatment capacity of 152.1 million gallons a day (mgd) for the district.

In contrast, the district's treatment capacity at three plants now totals 36.7 mgd.

Nowak noted that the district has a 10-year capital improvement program that is updated annually with refinements in growth projections by Chino Basin's member agencies, which include five cities, the county and Cucamonga County Water District for Rancho Cucamonga.

The ultimate sewage flows "seem to be pretty much overstated," because of the cities' "ambitious" forecasts for attracting "wet industries," those discharging a lot of wastewater, Nowak said.

The district's largest treatment plant is located in south Ontario and currently has a capacity of 26.5 mgd. It serves Montclair, Upland, Ontario and Rancho Cucamonga and is scheduled to serve Fontana as well.

Ultimate capacity needs were projected at 123.4 mgd for the plant's service area. The existing site has land available for expansion to at least 60 mgd and perhaps to 90 mgd, according to Tom Homan, assistant general manager. He explained that the actual figure is uncertain because it depends on variables such as technological innovations and water quality regulations.

The staff study identified a site on the south side of Foothill Boulevard at the eastern edge of Rancho Cucamonga to be explored as the possible location for a treatment plant with 15 mgd of capacity.

Nowak said the location was selected because of its high potential for use of reclaimed water by major industries, such as Southern California Edison, Kaiser Steel and Inland Container. He noted that the sewer master plan of the Cucamonga County Water District alone has identified reuse potential of up to 6.7 mgd. That figure does not take into account future reclamation in Ontario or Fontana.

The district's plant for the Chino area currently has a capacity of 6.7 mgd. Projections showed ultimate flows in the plant service area of 28.7 mgd. That figure reflects both growth in Chino, especially new industry, and development of the Chino Hills to a population of nearly 100,000.

Nowak said the district is looking at an abandoned sewage treatment plant on Carbon Canyon Road near Pomona-Rincon Road as a possible site for future capacity needs of the Chino Hills.

Homan said the plant used to be operated by the city of Chino until expansion and improvements of its other treatment plant more than 10 years ago. That plant is now operated by Chino Basin.

Another major part of the study was groundwater recharge.

Authority urges reading teachers to emphasize fun over phonics

By NANCY WALLACE
Staff Writer

Authorities on the teaching of reading have challenged area teachers to approach reading instruction with a new fervor, and to emphasize stories and themes instead of phonics and student errors.

Bruce Joyce of San Francisco State University, an authority on teachers' behavior, said that teachers should become "omnivorous readers," devouring every piece of literature in their path, to best teach and encourage their students to read.

In a study of elementary school teachers, Joyce said he found that just 10 percent were avid readers. Most teachers, he noted, are "passive consumers," reading only when others around them are reading. Others are "withdrawn," he said, reading only when necessary.

Joyce said he found that those few teachers who read often and well had a classroom setting and an enthusiasm that induced reading.

Teachers should read what children read, Joyce added. "Reading what children read ..., getting inside their literature, helps us get inside them," he explained.

Herbert Kohl, acclaimed author and researcher on reading instruction, said he recommends the converse; children can read what adults read, albeit revised versions, and glean the same pleasure.

Major works hold major themes such as hypocrisy, love and politics — concepts important enough to hold children's attention and make them want to read, Kohl explained.

"The impoverishment of the classroom is one of the major things you have to worry about," he warned the teachers.

Unfortunately, Kohl noted, the recent "back-to-basics" cry from politicians has made teachers afraid to teach beyond phonics.

"We can't tell our kids the difference between socialism and communism because we're afraid to talk about that," Kohl said. "People are afraid to talk about the issues. They're afraid to talk about love, about politics, about hypocrisy.

"It's very easy to reduce reading to phonics," he continued. "But literature doesn't exist in order to write a business letter. The reason it exists is to enrich human life."

Both Kohl and Joyce encouraged a move away from phonics.

"There is no proof that phonics works," Kohl said. "In fact, it's already failed." If phonics rehearsal was an effective teaching tool, he noted, there would not be so many students who cannot read.

"Teach to read, not about reading," Joyce added. He suggested a preferable classroom setting would be a sort of reading lab, where students may select books that interest them and then read at their own pace. The teacher holds brief conferences with each student about their books, gaining understanding of that individual's interests and progress.

Joyce, like Kohl, challenged teachers not to be discouraged by public opinion.

"Be absolutely determined to bring about the best possible conditions," he said.

Social Security proposal gets mixed reaction

Two local Republican lawmakers have expressed mixed reactions about the the compromise $169 billion proposal to solve the financially troubled Social Security System by increasing taxes and delaying cost-of-living increases for recipients.

Rep. David Dreier, R-33rd Dist., and Rep. Jerry Lewis, R-35th Dist., voiced concerns about some aspects of the plan but added they viewed other factors as acceptable.

But Rep. George E. Brown, D-36th Dist, whose district includes a portion of the west end of San Bernardino County and a portion of Riverside County, said he is "pleasantly surprised" that the bispartisan commission was able to arrive at solutions which he termed "highly favorable."

The commission, Brown said, arrived at a variety of solutions which individually are not significant but cumulatively will have "a huge impact."

Brown said he has received adverse comments from senior recipients whose cost-of-living increases will be delayed and also federal employees who question the plan to phase out the federal employee retirement system.

"I will weigh these concerns carefully," Brown said.

Dreier, whose district includes eastern Los Angeles County and a section of the west end of San Bernardino County, said he is "inclined to lean against the full package" unveiled by President Reagan's Social Security reform commission.

Specifically, Dreier said he has serious reservations about the delay in cost-of-living increases for recipients. The delay would be acceptable only if inflation remains stable or continues to diminish.

"We must ensure that current recipients and those near retirement age are not placed in jeopardy," he added.

Dreier, a member of the House Small Business Committee, said he is concerned about proposals to increase the Social Security tax for self-employed persons and increase the tax rate for all employed persons.

The cost for small businessmen would nearly double, Dreier said. He stated he deplores the concept of increasing taxes in a recessionary economy. But, he noted, there are indications the economy is recovering.

Dreier said he supports the plan to enroll federal employees and employees of non-profit corporations hired as of Jan. 1, 1984, in the Social Security System.

He also hailed the proposal to abolish "the windfall benefit" which allows federal retirees to collect a federal pension, obtain employment in the private sector for two years and then collect the minimum Social Security benefit.

Dreier expressed disappointment that the package did not include a plan to increase the retirement age for persons aged 40 and below from 65 to 66.

It is estimated this would save $1.6 trillion and solve the agency's long-term problem, he said.

Lewis, whose district includes a portion of the West End of San Bernardino County, said his initial reaction focused on the proposal's bipartisan backing.

He said approval by a large number of commission members clearly indicates that a compromise is possible.

"That prospect is very encouraging when you consider the reality that the system was due to go broke in June," he said.

But Lewis also noted serious concerns about several aspects of the package.

"I think one should look very carefully at elements of the package that suggest we automatically delay cost-of-lving increases for retired families who have been anticipating this increase," he said.

He also stated the implication of including civil service employees in Social Security should be closely examined.

He questioned the interplay between their contributions to current retirement systems and contributions to Social Security. "I want to be sure fairness is involved."

Also of concern, he said, is the proposal that would tax for the first time Social Security benefits for certain retirees.

"My initial reaction to that subject is that it seems to be a reasonable suggestion. But I want to make sure this doesn't become a pattern that becomes the proverbial camel's nose under the tent."

In conclusion, Lewis said he wants to see a lasting solution of problems that beset the Social Security Administration.

"Whatever we do, I want to make sure we put a stop to that kind of expediency on the part of Congress in which they delight in making promises at election time and then after election find it difficult to pay the bill.

"There's evidence that the solution is not going to become a political football. We may come up with some compromise that will hopefully solve the problem beyond the year 2,000," he said.

The commission recommended these steps to keep the system solvent:

★ Increase the Social Security tax from the current 6.7 percent to 7 percent next year.

★ Delay until January 1984 the Social Security cost-of-living increase for all recipients.

★ Make 50 percent of Social Security benefits taxable for retired individuals with incomes of $20,000 or more and couples with incomes of $25,000 or more.

★ Increase rates paid by the self-employed from 9.5 percent to 14 percent.

★ Enroll all federal workers hired as of Jan. 1, 1984, in the system.

Chino opposes prison population expansion

At the prompting of Mayor Larry Walker, the Chino City Council went on record last week in total opposition to any state proposal to expand the prison population in Chino.

The council unanimously concurred with Walker's comments regarding the ever-changing proposals by the state to house more convicted felons in Chino area institutions. And it will seek assistance from other San Bernardino County cities as well as state legislators to halt any attempt to increase Chino's prison population.

Quoting a newspaper article, the mayor said Gov. George Deukmejian proposed in his first budget that the state Department of Corrections take over the Youth Training School and, by double bunking prisoners, place 2,400 adult felons there. There are approximately 4,100 inmates at California Institution for Men now.

"The issue of prisons is again in the newspaper," Walker began. He cited the constantly changing proposals that have been discussed over the years by state officials regarding the housing of prisoners in Chino.

The Department of Corrections first proposed that YTS, a California Youth Authority facility in Chino, take over CIM's east facility, he said. Then it was suggested that YTS be traded to the adult department to relieve future overcrowding at CIM. The idea of utilizing tents to house prisoners at CIM was also suggested. Under Deukmejian's plan, YTS would not get CIM's east facility. And the nearly 1,200 wards housed at YTS would be relocated to other CYA facilities throughout the state.

Walker said "there is a substantial threat that changes (in the prison population) would have a negative, long-range impact on the Chino community." He asked the council to direct staff to make the prison issue its highest priority and solicit support for this not only in Chino, but statewide.

He said local officials must "widen the scope of the campaign to resist the massive influx of the prison population here." He also said the city should seek information from Sen. Ruben Ayala, D-34th Dist., regarding the legal ramifications of increasing the prison population in Chino.

Walker said a law approved in 1979 forbids that any more prisons be constructed in Chino. He said the effects of tents, remodeling, turning gyms into prison dormitories and takeover of YTS by the state Department of Corrections may violate that law.

Legislators should provide legal guidance in this issue, he said, as well as be alert to the community's concerns.

Councilman Bill Jahn concurred and made the motion for the council to go on record in opposition to expansion of prisons in Chino. He said it was imperative that local officials "get real answers from the prison and find out exactly what they have in mind." He felt there were numerous conflicting statements coming from state prison officials who now appeared to be "proposing to do exactly what they said they wouldn't."

Councilman Dan Briggs said, "We have borne the burden of the the prison system in our community for a long time. We don't want to expand upon that . . . It is a complex issue in terms of the lack of prisons statewide." Due to this complexity, he suggested that the San Bernardino Associated Governments and others be contacted to assure that officials in other cities within the county understand Chino's posture on more prisons.

"We can't be content to sit back and wait to see what will happen," Briggs said. "We must take the initiative."

Walker reiterated the need for clarification of the legal issues revolving around the 1979 action. "This could provide the foundation for halting the state in its tracks," he said. "We need to save the Chino area and save others in San Bernardino County (referring to proposals in Victorville and Adelanto). We're all in this together. We must gain more substantial involvement from others than in the past.

"It is clear that we're opposed to any increase in the prison population in Chino. And we're willing to do whatever it takes to stop it," Walker said.
